Header

<http://danielfiller.com/>

The Header that caught my eye was at danielfiller.com. It looks great and so simple to use. The designer built this website to show his skills in web development. I would have to say his target audience is people looking for websites to be built for their companies. He has some cool features on here as well. If you hover over his logo, it spins. Also, the navigation bar content rises when you hover over it. This is an overall fun and professional header.

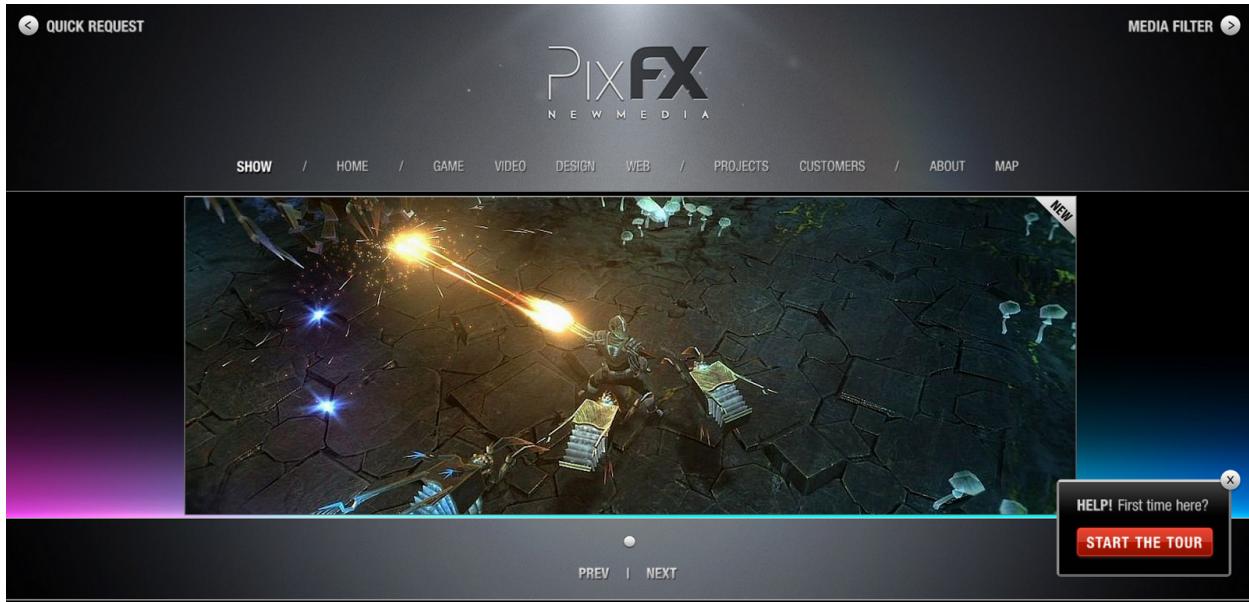

CTA call to action

Call to Action is fun. Every second there is a new pack design showing and its target audience is clearly men. This website makes you want to push that call to action button, and grunt really loud. They did a great job on this CTA the colors are dark and the text is bright and calls to you. Again, this site makes it very clear "Made for Men".

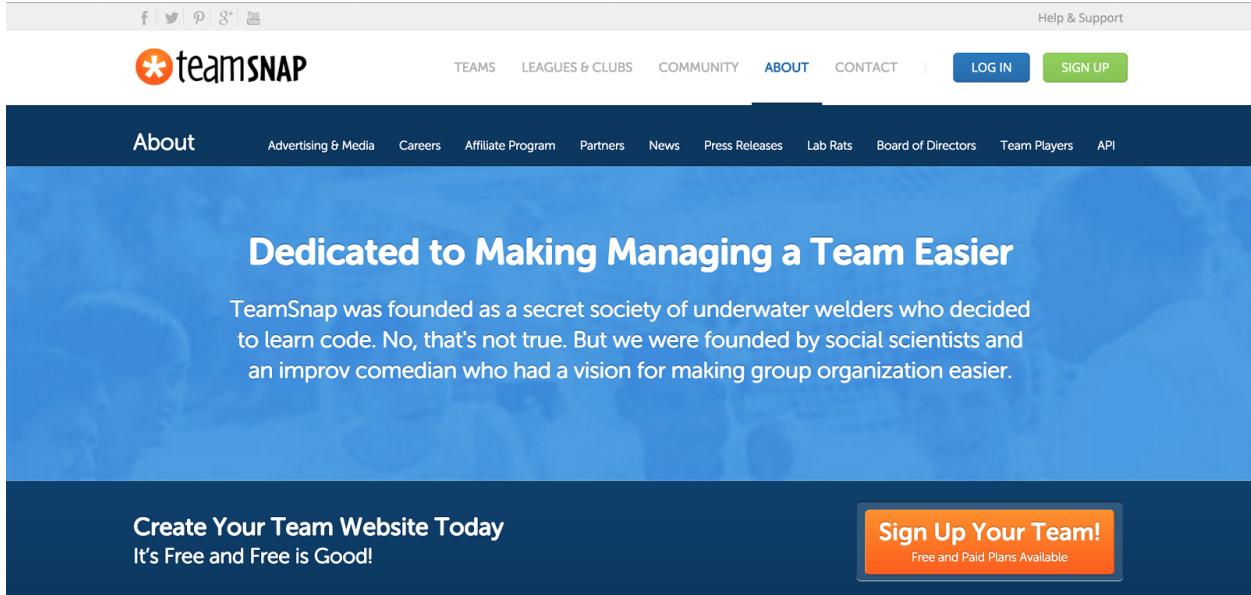

Features

<http://www.pixfx.at/#Home>

Oh man, this site is awesome; I was in shock when I first opened it. Talk about talented web designers. Some of the cool features on this site are the videos that play when you start, that scream, "this is pixfx, Welcome". When you click on a page you want to visit, a female robot voice calls out that page. Also, there is some music that plays in the background that pumps you up. The target audience for this website would be anyone that is looking for developers of many sorts. They offer development for games, webpages, videos. You name it, they offer it.

About

The screenshot shows the TeamSnap website's 'About' page. At the top, there's a navigation bar with social media links (Facebook, Twitter, Pinterest, Google+, YouTube) and a 'Help & Support' link. The main header features the 'teamSNAP' logo. Below the header is a secondary navigation bar with links: TEAMS, LEAGUES & CLUBS, COMMUNITY, ABOUT (which is bolded to indicate it's the current page), CONTACT, LOG IN, and SIGN UP. The main content area has a blue background with a faint watermark of a person. A large, bold heading reads 'Dedicated to Making Managing a Team Easier'. Below this, a text block says: 'TeamSnap was founded as a secret society of underwater welders who decided to learn code. No, that's not true. But we were founded by social scientists and an improv comedian who had a vision for making group organization easier.' At the bottom of the page, there are two calls-to-action: 'Create Your Team Website Today' (with the subtext 'It's Free and Free is Good!') and a red button labeled 'Sign Up Your Team!' (with the subtext 'Free and Paid Plans Available').

This About page is nice to look at and easy to use. There are sub-categories that you can click on and it will display on the website. The target audience for this website would be people who have teams and need to make rosters and keep track of everyone. This website makes it easier for them to share this information with people on the team, or other coaches. I like the colors on this page because they are bright and stand out.

Blogging: there's no better place to do it than Facebook. It's fun to blog on Facebook, and easy. All you have to do is click on the entry field and type. When you're done, you press the post button. Target audience: anyone that likes to talk to their friends, which is everyone. Great site; the colors could use some updates but other than that, it gets the job done.

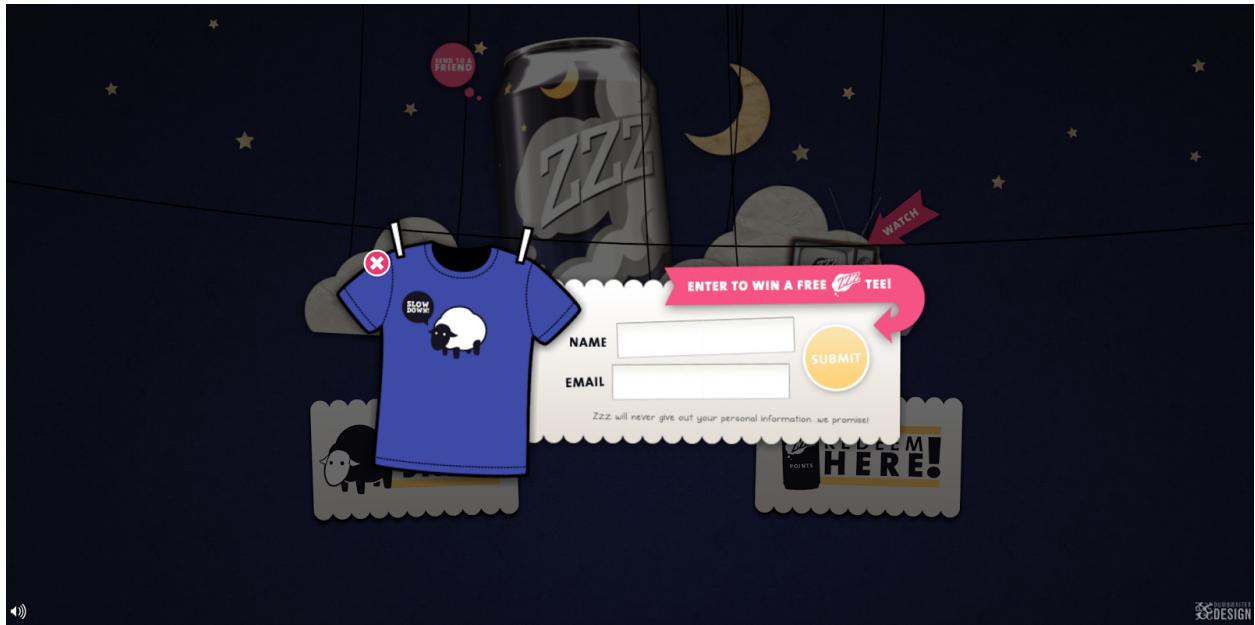

Contact

<http://builtbybuffalo.com/contact>

This is a nice contacts page. There was a lot of effort put into it. Usually, I just see text that says "email" that you click on to send an email. This page added phone numbers, Twitter, Skype. They even have icons for each one. Target audience for this webpage are for people that are looking for a website to be built. I like the colors on this website because it is simple and clear to see what you are looking for.

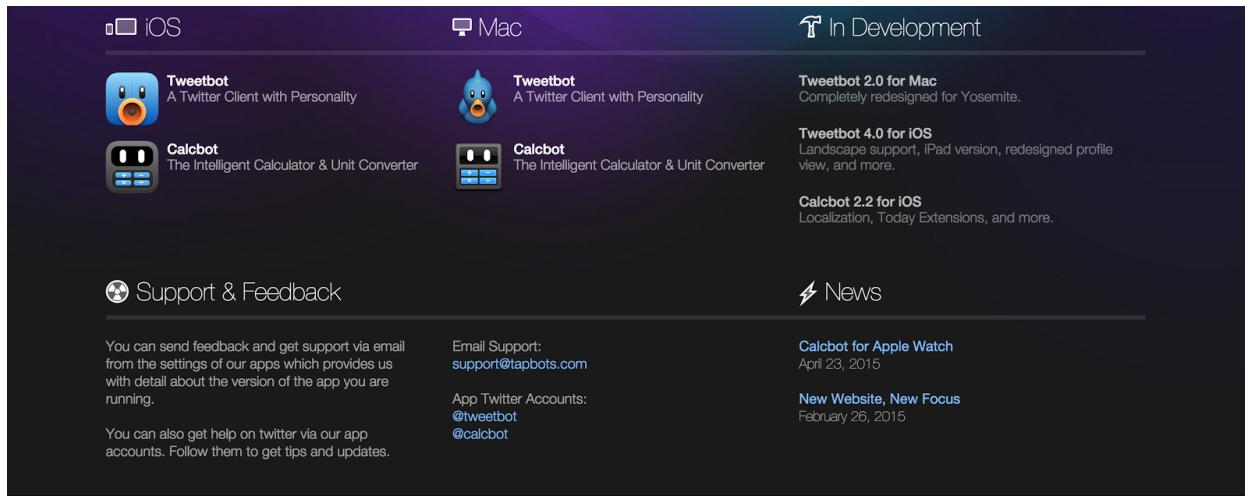

Login/Registration

<http://zzz.drinkzzz.com/>

This one is cool looking, I like the little shirt they have on the page. This makes it fun, and pop out. This would be something I would actually enjoy filling out. Target audience? I couldn't tell you. I have no idea what they are selling. If I had to guess, I would say ZZZ is a drink. That could be something they need to work on. Maybe they could add more text telling us what they are selling.

Footer

<http://tapbots.com/>

Great Footer! It's rare to see a footer that uses icons like this. Usually, it's just text in a column. Target audience is people that like to use apps on Apple products. These guys build apps for Apple. I like the colors on this webpage, they really stand out and make you feel excited.

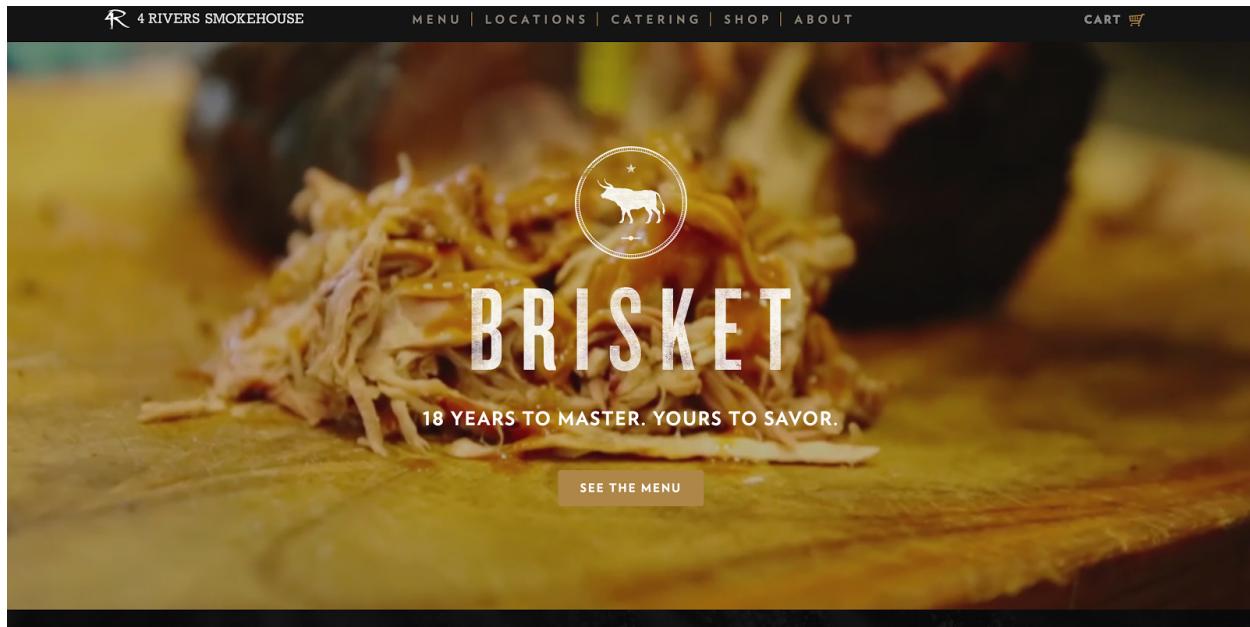

Photo Gallery

This photo gallery is nice. I love the spacing between each picture. The colors used on this website give it a modern feel. The target audience is people that like fashion, or enjoy beauty. I don't see anything on this website that is selling anything, just showing the new trends that are out there.

<https://4rsmokehouse.com/>

Home pages to are very important in web design. I definitely want my homepage to move like this when I make one. Adding the text in the middle with a button focuses your attention on clicking it, while, at the same time, you're still in awe over the background moving. Target audience would be people that love to eat meat. Just looking at this homepage is making me hungry.
